Notice

- The image contains a detailed table format for recording pregnancy and birth-related data, with specific questions related to maternal age, duration of pregnancy, child survival status, and other relevant details. The data includes binary yes/no answers and additional numeric entries for duration and dates.
- The form is designed to record information on both live births and non-live births, with segments dedicated to stillbirths and miscarriages.
- The table structure allows for the tracking of multiple pregnancies, providing a comprehensive view of reproductive history.

Analysis

- The document is likely part of a demographic or health survey, focusing on reproductive health and pregnancy outcomes.
- The presence of questions about the duration of pregnancies, child survival, and maternal age indicates a detailed approach to data collection.
- The form's structure supports a systematic approach to recording vital statistics, which is crucial for public health monitoring and research.

301. Now I would like to talk about a somewhat different subject. As you perhaps know, there are different means which a woman can use to delay or avoid pregnancy. These include methods furnished by Europeans as well as other means always used here in Africa, that is herbs, bark from trees, special drinks, etc. I would like to talk now about both types of methods. Have you ever heard of any traditional African ways?

302. I mean, have you ever heard of any traditional methods which women use to delay or avoid a pregnancy?

303. What are the methods that you have heard of?

Probe: Do you know of any other?

If yes: Which ones?

Record answer and proceed to circle the boxes in Column 1 corresponding to the method mentioned. For each method mentioned, ask:

Have you ever used ________________ (Method)?

Use the same words as the respondent used in 312 to name the methods. Circle the response in Column 3 corresponding to each method mentioned.

Now ask 314 to 324 skipping the methods circled in Column 1. Prepare the questioning by saying:

There are some methods which you have not mentioned and I would like to know if you might have heard of them. Thus, I will now describe them to see whether you may have heard of them.

Start with the first uncircled method.
313 Just to make sure, let me describe some methods to see if you may have heard of any of them.
